

Claude HENRY

Physicist turned economist, Claude Henry has been at École polytechnique for thirty years, as head for research in economics, and as professor of public and environmental economics. During that period, he has been co-editor of the Review of Economic Studies and then of the Journal of Public Economics. Among his research topics are: weak interactions in elementary particles physics, differential equations with discontinuities, decision-making under uncertainty, public services and public utilities economics, intellectual property mechanisms and innovation. He has also been for five years a member of the Conseil d'Analyse Économique in Prime Minister Lionel Jospin's office.

Claude Henry is currently professor of sustainable development at Sciences Po Paris and at Columbia University. He is president of the Scientific Council of IDDRI at Sciences Po.
